

Georgios Doukidis is Professor of eBusiness in the Department of Management Science and Technology at the Athens University of Economics and Business (AUEB). He holds an MSc in Operational Research and PhD in Artificial Intelligence from the London School of Economics (LSE) where he worked as lecturer in 1984-90. He is the founder of ELTRUN -the largest eBusiness Research Center of all European Business Schools- that has participated successfully in more than 40 international R&D projects with leading Universities and global companies. He has taught in leading European Business Schools and was visiting professor at LSE and Brunel University. He has published more than 200 papers, 20 books and supervised successfully 19 PhD students. In the last 30 years he has acted as consultant or board member in more than 50 local or international organizations in the fields of e-business, business development, innovation and re-engineering and digital transformation. In the past he was the first chairman of TANEO and director of the Innovation and Entrepreneurship Center of AUEB.